PIERRE NAMED AMONG “TOP 100” LEADERS IN LIFE-SCIENCES INDUSTRY

PharmaVOICE 100 Recognizes Professional Contributions and Accomplishments

Ellicott City, MD (August 11, 2009) – Christine K. Pierre, President and CEO of RxTrials, Inc., has been named to the PharmaVOICE 100, an annual list of individuals recognized for their leadership and positive contributions to the life-sciences industry.

Nominated by the thousands of readers of PharmaVOICE, individuals are named to the list based on how they have motivated and inspired others, been a leader in their particular field, and contributed through community and philanthropic activities. Their accomplishments are diverse, impacting their companies, their peers and their industry.

Pierre founded RxTrials 15 years ago and shaped the organization into a quality-driven network of clinical research sites conducting studies in a variety of therapeutic areas. As she built her business, she developed a reputation as an expert on site operations and subject recruitment and retention, and as an advocate for professional ethics and human subject protection. She founded RxTrials Institute to further education and development of clinical research site staff. RxTrials Institute hosts the highly regarded Site Solutions Summit, now in its fourth year, which brings together site and industry stakeholders to discuss real site issues and to create solutions and industry benchmarks.
